

NAVIGATING THE JOURNEY AS A CAREGIVER

Your loved one has a diagnosis of Major Depressive Disorder (MDD).

What's next?

Behaviors and Challenges You May Recognize

People with Major Depressive Disorder (or simply Depression) experience periods where their mind, emotions and body are in a painful or low-energy state. The emotional struggle, defeating thoughts, and physical pain or lethargy brought on by depression may make it challenging for your loved one to go about life as normal. They may be experiencing:

- Lack of interest engaging with the world
- Feelings of hopelessness or pointlessness
- Guilty thoughts and feeling like a burden
- Difficulty sleeping or sleeping too much
- Lack of authentic connecting; too busy hiding sadness
- Bodily responses such as weakness or soreness
- Suicidal thoughts and thoughts of self-harm
- Hygiene, exercise, or diet starting to slip
- Numbness, difficulty feeling enjoyment

This journey of navigating your loved one's MDD diagnosis may look daunting at first. Yet, it can help to shift that compass and look at this journey as an opportunity for GROWTH. On this journey, you can NURTURE your relationship with your loved one AND yourself.

Supporting Your Loved One

You and your loved one are embarking on a growth journey and will navigate their diagnosis TOGETHER. Be PATIENT with your loved one AND yourself as you learn which coping strategies are most helpful.

The greatest gift we can give our loved ones is ACCEPTANCE of what they are going through in the moment. To help them you can also practice boundary-setting, utilize outside help, and take care of YOU! It will empower you BOTH on this journey for you to give yourself love and rest. YOU will be more able to give the care they need and THEY will witness your self-care example.

You can also provide your loved with resources. See the next page for ways to help manage MDD.
